PUEBLO'S BOOM.

The Excursion to Pueblo Declared a Great Success

Thousands of Visitors Shown the Sights of the City.

Senator Teller has a Lengthy Talk with Gen. Harrison.

Considerable Speculation as to His Mission Indulged In.

Excursionists at Pueblo.

Pueblo, December 28.—The excursion from Denver to Pueblo to-day was a grand success in every way. Up to this writing 1200 people have arrived in the city from the north and 800 more are coming on the night train. All the excursionists were received at the union depot and escorted to the different hotels in carriages, and soon after many of them were being escorted over the city to see the sights.

At the Grand Local rotunda to-night Mayor Royal delivered an address of welcome, which was responded to by General Cameron in a very happy vein for the Denver visitors. He predicted a population of 150,000 for Pueblo in a very few years. Committees were appointed to look after the incoming excursionists and arrangements completed for a grand concert and ball at Armory hall to-morrow night for the benefit of the excursionists, whose tickets are good for four days.

Kilrain and Mitchell the pugilists had agreed to appear here to-night on a guarantee of $1000 and expenses, but by some means they missed connection and failed to arrive. A great many people came in from the west and south to-day also, and there are not less than 2500 strangers in the city to-night. To-day's real estate transfers amounted to over $40,000.

Teller Calls on the President-Elect.

INDIANAPOLIS, December 28.—The only distinguished out-of-town visitor at the residence of President-elect Harrison to-day was Senator Henry M. Teller of Colorado, by courtesy of the senator called President Arthur. Senator Teller arrived in the city last night and was the guest of Colonel and Mrs. N. R. Buckles. He had a lengthy talk with the president-elect this morning and left the city shortly after noon. There is considerable speculation as to what passed between the great coal and his visitor, and especially as to what was the senator's particular mission.

In an interview had a few minutes prior to his calling on the president-elect, Senator Teller said he thought the tariff bill would pass the senate not later than January 22 or 26. He did not believe there would be an extra session of congress. Regarding talk about Senator Wolcott of Oregon, as a cabinet possibility, Teller said: "He would make a very good cabinet officer, but I don't know that he desires such a position. I have heard of no effort to urge him. I doubt if he would leave the senate. There is nothing in the way of his acceptance. If he should be appointed his successor in the senate would be a republican, as the Oregon legislature is republican." The senator thought that one new cabinet officer would certainly come from the west. He said that he expected to express his views to the president-elect on political matters, but he should not ask him to appoint a man to any position. He should, however, tell him what he thought about some men.

In response to a query as to whether republican senators were not generally of the opinion that Blaine should be induced to enter the cabinet, the senator replied, "There is a division of opinion among friends think that he will be secretary of state, but there are people who think his appointment might not be advisable."

Conflicting opinions exist to-night among local politicians as to Senator Teller's cabinet suggestions and recommendations to the president-elect. The real truth as to what if anything the senator said on this point is known only to himself and General Harrison. From a gentleman who is well advised on New York politics it is said Senator Teller is a strident supporter of ex-Senator Platt, and this fact being established it seems probable that he spoke a good word for Platt.

Ute Claim Rejected.

WASHINGTON, December 28.—Commissioner Stockslager of the general land office has rejected the claim of the state of Colorado for lands selected by the state as indemnity for school lands granted that are included in Indian reservations. The selections which are embraced in lists transmitted through the commissioner from local offices at Pueblo, Leadville and Glenwood Springs, Colo., cover 77,195 acres of land. The ground of rejection is that the lands were all selected in one body, which is not in conformity with the act of March 3, 1875, admitting Colorado in the Union. This act provides that land selected as indemnity for the loss of granted school sections shall be contiguous to the land lost. The rejected selections will be subject to settlement and entry.

Colorado Teachers.

DENVER, December 28.—The State teachers association adjourned to-day after an interesting session of five days. The following are the officers for the ensuing year: President, Paul H. Hanus, Denver; vice president, D. T. Stone, Grand Junction; secretary, Miss Maud Bell, Fort Collins; treasurer, James C. Shattuck, Denver; executive committee, Fred Dick, Trinidad, J. P. Jackson, Longmont, W. T. Eddingfield, Aspen. The officers of the college and high school section of the association are, president, J. R. Brackett, Boulder; vice president, W. W. Wells, Leadville; secretary, Miss A. L. Mittler, Pueblo; executive committee, Wm. H. Snyder, Denver; S. A. Jones, Colorado Springs; W. Wright.

London Times After Testimony.

DUBLIN, December 28.—The Freeman's Journal, referring to the Parnell Commission, says: "The [illegible] of evidence regarding outrages is [illegible] of securing testimony to justify the statement made by Attorney General Webster in his opening address. Feeling the ground slipping from under its feet, resolved upon a desperate game to retrieve its fortune. With this in view it despatched an emissary to America who discovered Sheridan at Pueblo, Colo., and tried to induce him to go to London and testify before the commission, promising him if his evidence proved satisfactory he would be paid ten thousand pounds within an hour after the examination was concluded. Sheridan played with the agent for a time. Finally he wrote a letter declining to undertake the mission. The letter was delivered to the agent, who left for London. Sheridan then wrote to Parnell, telling him what he had done. Parnell replied, thanking him for his action."

THE FATAL CURVE.

Two Freight Trains on the Rock Island Road Collide.

A Fireman Killed and Four Other Persons Injured.

Both Engines and Several Cars Completely Wrecked.

The Killed and Injured Employes Brought to this City.

El Paso county was the scene of another terrible railroad accident yesterday. Two freight trains came together near Tip Top on the Rock Island road, some thirty miles east of the city. One man was killed instantly, two probably fatally injured and two others badly hurt.

Local freight train No 44, engine 512, in charge of Engineer Sam Hoge and Fireman Murray Headley, left the depot at 7 o'clock, its schedule time. On the train was Engineer Hedry Houtz, a new employe of the road who was going out with them to learn the road for the purpose of bringing a train back. At Mayfield, the first station east of Falcon, the train was five minutes late. Its time at Mayfield is 6:40. The next station beyond Mayfield is Tip Top, and between Mayfield and the point of the accident the train had made up no lost time. At about one mile and a half west of Tip Top the train collided with the first section of a west bound extra in charge of Engineer Eugene Core and Fireman W. E. Harding. The extra was composed of engine No 510 and about ten cars, some of which were filled with coal. The latter train was pounding at about the rate of twenty five miles an hour.

The accident occurred in a stone cut and on a curve, and is what is usually known as a "blind curve." Neither of the crews were aware of the approach of the other train until the shock came. With fearful force the engines fairly leaped into each other, and a most fearful wreck was the result. The cut was fairly filled with broken engines and cars. The engines were driven into each other up to the boilers and the cars were piled in every direction.

The crews had no opportunity to escape, nor did they know of the danger until the shock came. With fearful force they were thrown in every direction. The body of W. E. Harding was found near the head of the engine and must have been thrown through the cab window. How any one escaped from the wreck alive is a mystery.

W. E. Harding, the fireman on No. 510, was killed instantly. His head is crushed and his right foot cut off.

The injured are:

Sam Hoge, engineer on engine 512, skull fractured and suffering from concussion of the brain. Will probably die.

Henry E. Houtz, engineer, riding to the end of the division, hip fractured and internal injuries. Will probably die.

Eugene Core, engineer on engine 519, bruised on head and face, and leg injured.

Murray Headly, badly bruised on head and face.

The latest explanation of the accident is that the extra was several hours late and should have been in Colorado Springs on Thursday evening and was continually losing time. The engineer of the east bound train attempted to make Tip Top on the other's time, with the result of the accident.

The news of the accident was sent to this city immediately but did not become generally known until about noon, when the wounded were brought in. General Superintendent W. J. Allen of Topeka happened to be in the city and at 8 o'clock his special car was sent to the wreck with the company physician on board. The dead and wounded were brought to the city about 12 o'clock, and the wounded were taken to the Sisters' hospital. Coroner Davis was notified and immediately came over from Manitou. The remains of Harding were taken to Davis & Co.'s undertaking establishment where they now lie. The coroner has summoned a jury which will meet this morning at 10 o'clock to begin the inquisition upon the body of Harding.

All railroad men were very reticent in regard to anything connected with the wreck and it was almost impossible to learn anything regarding the men who were injured and they were not in condition to be questioned.

W. E. Harding, the fireman killed, was about 24 years of age. Was tall, well built and very good looking. His home was in a town in Kansas, the name of which could not be learned, but he has a brother Harry who has been telegraphed to.

Henry E. Houtz, the engineer who was riding on No 44, has but just come to the Rock Island from Trinidad, Colo. He is a member of Rocky Mountain lodge, Knights of Pythias, of that city, which has been informed of his condition.

Sam Hoge engineer of engineer 512, has been unconscious ever since the accident, suffering with concussion of the brain, but little could be learned of him except that he had no family. None of the seriously injured men had families.

All of the passengers on the Rock Island yesterday were transferred by trains run to either side of the cut. At 6 o'clock last night the Rock Island mail from the east had not arrived at the postoffice.

None of the conductors or brakemen were seriously injured although considerably shaken up and bruised. They had nothing to say regarding the accident.

*The Pueblo base ball club of 1888.
T. W. Sullivan, Signal Corps.

The Denver and Rio Grande railroad is going to double track.

Mr John Kelly is quite seriously ill with fever at his home on Boulder ave.

Mr J. D. Duncan of the Saturday Mail and his little son are both quite seriously ill.

The face of Mr. Henry Kranz, the Tejon street barber, was wreathed in smiles yesterday. The arrival of a girl baby at his house was the cause.

A prize fight occurred at Howbert on the Midland railroad on Wednesday evening between Jack Davis and an unknown [illegible]. Davis knocked his opponent out in one round.

The ball of the Matt France Hose company on New Year's night promises to be a great success. The members of the company are making every effort to make it as pleasant as possible.

The Western Building and Supply company yesterday signed a contract for the building of the school house at Roswell. It is to be built from plans furnished by the company and will cost $6,000.

A. R. Ballou has just placed a burglar proof Hall safe in his establishment on Pike's Peak avenue. It weighs 2500 pounds and is one of the handsomest in the city.

The Rio Grande road announces in a business local this morning that it will sell excursion tickets to Pueblo and return to-day for $1 for the round trip. They will be good on any train during the day, and are good to return until the first day of January.

The Saturday Mail has been moved into the rooms over Bernard Bros.' grocery store on Tejon street and is quite comfortably located. The Mail has had a longer life than any democratic newspaper ever published in the county, and seems to be prospering.

Mr. E. P. Moon of Husted has furnished us with the following weather record for the week ending December 26th: Highest temperature, 61° on the 22d; lowest temperature, 16° on the 20th; weekly mean temperature, 33.33°. Prevailing direction of the wind, south.

The directors of the Base Ball association met yesterday and elected Henry S. Woodruff, president, Grayson Fowler, vice president, A. C. Schlessinger, secretary. A meeting of representatives from the various clubs in the state for the formation of a state league, was called for January 15th at Colorado Springs.

In a letter to the Gazette, Mr. A. W. Bailey announces that he will be the sole proprietor of The Mansions house and Manitou hotel, at Manitou, next summer, Mr. George Walker having retired from the firm. Mr. Bailey has been for many years in the hotel business in Manitou and knows its summer trade as well as any one in the world.

The announcement of the marriage of Mr. Patrick Jones, the popular horse shoer and mechanic of East Huerfano street, yesterday was a too practical joke of one of his friends. While such an event may likely happen in the near future, there is but little doubt Mr Jones does not care to have such practical jokes perpetrated upon him. The item was handed in to the Gazette as genuine and the paper had no reason to believe but that it was correct. We hope that the gentlemen above mentioned will accept this explanation.

To day three grand excursions will be run over the Denver, Texas and Gulf, the Santa Fe and the Denver and Rio Grande railroads from Denver to Pueblo. The trains will leave Denver at 9 o'clock sharp. A fine programme has been prepared for the entertainment of those who attend the excursion, which includes a grand procession & visit to the steel works and smelters, a ball at the Grand hotel, the opening of the De Remer opera house, and a concert by Denver Apollo quartette. The fare from Colorado Springs for the round trip is $1 00 on the Rio Grande; on the other roads $1 50.

BUSINESS LOCALS.

Wrong Impressions Corrected!

No one should suppose, because of the qualities of Indian goods to be seen in our store that such things are plentiful or easily obtained. As a matter of fact they can only be picked up here and there in the Indian country by persistent efforts. While on my recent collecting trip I bought everything I could find in this line that I considered desirable, without any regard to quantity, and I doubt if all other Curiosity Stores in Colorado and New Mexico together could make as large a showing of the same class of goods. What is seen in our store constitutes about three-fourths of the VISIBLE SUPPLY. It may be said in fact that we have a CORNER ON THE MARKET. We do not intend to take advantage of our customer, on this account, however, but will give them all a chance to come in and COVER THEIR SHORTAGE before the prices go up.

We are having brief histories of some of our Indian wares printed on slips of paper, and customers who buy such articles for presents will be furnished with as many of the slips as they need for their friends. It will save much writing and the slips may be kept with the articles in the cabinet.

We pack for shipment, without extra charge, any fragile articles sold by us, as we know that inexperienced packing of such goods is apt to result in disaster.

We have a large stock of Gold and Silver Filigree Jewelry this year, made by Mexicans in Santa Fe, and our stock of Native Jewelry and Agate goods is very complete.

We have just had five dozen choice genuine Indian arrow heads mounted as Scarf and Lace Pins, and have had three dozen fine Mexican Opals, handsomely mounted in Scarf Pins and Finger Rings, all of which will be on sale this morning.

Some one asked me the other day if I bought any Opals while in New Mexico. Why, we have the past year carried a larger stock of Opals than all the dealers in New Mexico together, and I took Opals down there with me to sell to them at wholesale. We act as agents for the largest Opal dealer of Mexico

The fate of the four officers connected with the celebrated Fidelity bank failure does not offer much encouragement to bank wreckers. One is dead and one dying, while of the other two, one is hopelessly insane and the other broken down in both health and mind.

The appointment by President Cleveland of Leon O Bailey to the United States district attorneyship in Indiana has excited a good deal of comment from the press of the country. The New York Sun says: "Bailey, although a deputy district attorney, was a very offensive partisan and all through the last campaign made particularly bitter speeches, attacking Harrison personally."

The vote of West Virginia shows steady republican gains since 1876. The democratic majorities have been as follows:

1876 Tilden 14,661
1880 Hancock 11,148
1884 Cleveland 4,252
1888 Cleveland 591

Unless the republican party makes some serious mistake in the next four years West Virginia may be put down as a sure republican state.

In the Eleventh ward in Boston 3375 men voted out of 4028 registered. This is about eighty five per cent. In the same ward 823 women voted out of 870 registered or about ninety five per cent. This is the best answer we have known to the objection to woman suffrage on the ground that women will not vote. They will vote when they think there is any moral issue.

Captain M. L. De Course wrote to some of his real estate lot holders in New York, and they ordered through him three hundred and fifty copies of the New Year's GAZETTE. Most of these will be distributed in England, Germany and Holland. This is a good example for other of our readers to follow. We should be very glad to pay for judicious advertising ourselves, but when we can get people in the east to do this for us, it is all the better.

The last paragraph of the first section of the river and harbor bill now before the house contains a rather neat provision. It provides that Speaker Carlisle shall appoint a committee for the next house, which will have a republican speaker. The committee would of course be provided with a democratic chairman and clerks. It is to be furnished with a sufficient sum to pay its expenses in roaming around the country and examining into various proposed river and harbor improvements. This is probably a pet scheme of Mr. Blanchard, the present chairman of the river and harbor committee, and the author of the bill, to secure for himself a snug berth under republican rule. Mr. Blanchard is unquestionably a very able gentleman and the report of a committee working under his direction would undoubtedly excite universal interest, but the speaker of the next congress will no doubt be fully competent to appoint all committees necessary, and the gentleman from Louisiana is on the wrong side of the political fence to get a job.

The mayor of a town in Alabama has written a letter to a Montgomery paper in which he uses very plain language. He says, "We cannot go on forever stealing the negro's ballot. There must be a wiser and more honorable solution of the question. We have gone too far in our election frauds, and soon we shall learn that success founded on fraud cannot be permanent. In the black belt, where the negroes are in the greater majority, the tactics by which the negro has been deprived of his vote has also served the purpose of depriving the white men of fair representation. The negro vote has been used to count the south Alabama democrat in and the north Alabama democrat out." It is well that the south is beginning to suffer some of the injustice in representation that the north suffers in congress. Every white man in the south casts practically two votes to the northern man's one. The next representation in congress might be on the basis of the vote provided our constitution can be so amended. Then the south cannot have the black man represented in congress and yet deprive him of his vote.

Quiet Now in Oklahoma.

St. Louis, December 28.—Latest advices from Indian territory received by letter from Oklahoma Station, Indian territory, are that the stories reported yesterday having driven a number of settlers from the place suddenly departed, the chief having received information from headquarters that his action was arbitrary and unauthorized. It is believed there will be no further interference with the Whites who remain peaceful.

Gainesville, Texas, December 28.—One hundred families with teams crossed the South Canadian river at Purcell, Indian territory yesterday, entering the Oklahoma country to settle on claims near Purcell.

Leasing the Cherokee Strip.

St. Louis, December 28.—A special from Kansas City says Chief Mayes of Cherokee Nation that city for the purpose of conferring with the president of the Cherokee Strip Live Stock association in regard to that account for the Cherokee strip, the contract calling for $200,000 a year for five years. While it is eminently satisfactory to the Cherokees it has not been signed, neither will it be until every detail of it can fully looked after. Chief Mayes is bitterly opposed to the opening of Oklahoma.

COLORADO CITY.

I have the largest and most complete list of lots in Colorado City and Bott's additions. Nearly all these lots are on the line of water pipes. They range in price from $30 to $100 each; most of them can be bought on very easy terms. No town in Colorado has brighter prospects for a rapid growth in the near future than Colorado City, and no safer investment can be made at this time than in these lots.

HAYTI'S SURRENDER.

Final Report of Admiral Luce's Arrival at Hayti.

The Galena and Yantic Enter the Port Cleared for Action.

Legitime Yields the Captured Vessel Under Protest.

Respect for the American Flag Compelled in Time.

News from Hayti.

NEW YORK, December 29.—The steamer Prince Maurita arrived this morning and reports that she left the men of war Galena and Yantic at Port au Prince. So far as the steamer Haytien Republic. The latter was anchored in the outside bay. Everything was quiet there.

Chief Officer Sabbelee stated that he saw no excitement at Port au Prince, or at other ports where he stopped. He left apparent general satisfaction with Salnave's presidency. The Haytien fleet was lying in the harbor of Port au Prince, literally covered with American flags, and everybody seemed to be making merry over the settlement of the difficulty. Sabbelee states that there is no truth in the story of the bombardment of Cape Haytien, though other Haytien ports were blockaded.

Legitime was inaugurated president with great pomp and ceremony on the 4th. The Galena and Yantic were in port at the time. President Legitime visited the Galena and had a conference with Admiral Luce. It is understood he offered no resistance to the demand for the Haytien Republic's release. The vessels moved in the inner harbor, and officers afterwards made a survey of the harbor.

On December 18, the Haytien national constitutional assembly, which had been in session four days, after much dispute declared the existing constitution, then unanimously proceeded to vote confirming the action of the central revolutionary committee in deposing Legitime. The vote was unanimous, as only one of the forty four delegates present were from the southern department supporting Legitime, and the remaining four, papers on the Haytien vessels when captured, were detained by the provisional palace, dined, wined and concerted all the availability of office to govern the four northern provinces they represented.

Three foreign powers were immediately apprised of his election, agreeing to respect all his contracts, and a portion of the navy was ordered to this port to make the demonstration in honor of the event and take part in the inaugural.

The United States fleet, after an absence of eleven days, was then ordered to the usual head of the Haytien harbor to enliven the harbor, and was upon the arrival of the American vessels after having bombarded Cape Haytien, Port de Paix, San Marc and other Haytien ports in the north and west and forced the demoralizing of all foreign coasting trade, it has been decided to advance forward ships in connection with the army marching to the force of General Hyppolyte, which have occupied on the frontier from small detachments, and no serious general engagement near, San Marc was constantly looked for.

While the navy and most of government are in the hands of the Legitime men, the troops under Hyppolyte are superior in morale and general efficiency to render their commander a Napoleon. Inhabitants of San Marc, recently invaded are in a most destitute situation, such being the condition to some extent in all bombarded ports.

Among the passengers were Corah L. Bazelais, a lieutenant in the Haytian army, A. M. Pongnet, I. Wongenal and Mme. de De Contreras, wife of the Haytian general of that name. The latter are connected with the Hayti department of the north, and took passage on a French steamer for Havre this afternoon. It is believed they are going to France to make strenuous efforts to suggest the French government to the Haytian difficulty and if possible get that power to furnish a man-of-war in the use of army of the north. Mme. De Contreras positively refuses to talk about the purpose of her journey.

ABOARD U. S. S. GALENA, OFF PORT AU PRINCE, December 21.—The Galena and Yantic which left New York December 12 steamed into the harbor of Port au Prince December 20, at 9 a. m., cleared for action and the crews stood at their quarters, to demand of the alleged provisional government instant release of the former Haytien Republic. On their arrival in the outer harbor, the rear admiral transferred his flag to the Yantic, which has a draught of but fourteen feet. The Yantic was then run slowly into the inner harbor to within a hundred yards of the docks, where the Haytien Republic was at anchor. Anchor was dropped and a stern line at once attached to the Haytien Republic, the men of the Yantic being trained on the guns. The Galena remained in the outer harbor with her broadside and stern broadside and prepared to fire in case of hostile demonstration.

Besides the crew also stood at quarters, the result of the interview with Lieutenant Griffin of the Galena, well known Lieutenant Griffin returned shortly after nine o'clock with instructions from the state department and Admiral Luce demanding the release within four hours of the vessels and the withdrawal of the Legitime forces. Legitime seeing that no delay was granted under formal protest consented for future arbitration, consented to tow the Haytien vessels to the position in the outer harbor occupied when captured by his mechanics before her cable could be unshipped and her chains had been cleared. Formal return was not made the next day.

The effect of this prompt action of Admiral Luce has been most salutary on the Haytian people. The influence of the foreign powers was immediately exerted in his election, and a portion of the navy was ordered to this port to make the demonstration in honor of the event and take part in the inaugural.

The United States fleet, after an absence of eleven days, was then ordered to the usual head of the Haytien harbor to enliven the harbor, and was upon the arrival of the American vessels after having bombarded Cape Haytien, Port de Paix, San Marc and other Haytien ports in the north and west and forced the demoralizing of all foreign coasting trade, it has been decided to advance forward ships in connection with the army marching to the force of General Hyppolyte, which have occupied on the frontier from small detachments, and no serious general engagement near, San Marc was constantly looked for.

COLORADO LYNCHING.

Greeley's Citizens Could Not Brook the Law's Delay.

W. D. French Taken from the Jail and Hanged.

Condemned Bald Knobbers Escape by Outside Help.

Maryland Authorities Battle Again with Oyster Pirates.

Lynching at Greeley.

GREELEY, December 24.—A large body of masked men overpowered Sheriff Wolaver last night, and failing to get the keys of the jail, threw away the block work around the door. They opened the outer door, broke the locks off and forced the cages and took out W. D. French and hanged him to a tree near the jail. A coroner's inquest is in progress, but no clue to the perpetrators has yet been obtained. It is apparent the indignant citizens could not wait for the law to take its course, fearing there was a possibility of his escape from punishment for the killing of Henry Woodbury, just two weeks ago. On that day the murder in question occurred at Evans, four miles below here, the details being of a most shocking character.

W. D. French and his son, John Samples and John Hoxsin, entered the house of Harry Woodbury by breaking in the door and deliberately shot, killing him instantly. French was a large cattle owner and farmer, and Woodbury had been associated with him this season in farming. A dispute arose in the division of 187 pounds of flour, which was carried into court, and Woodbury won the case. French, with his gang of men, who are cowboys, went to Woodbury's residence and committed the cowardly deed. They found him with his wife and two children. Five or more shots were fired, only one taking effect. The villains fled, but were pursued by Sheriff Wolaver and posse, who captured the entire party at French's ranch, ten miles from Evans. They are now confined in the county jail at this place.

Extensive Jail Delivery.

OZARK, Mo., December 29.—Jolin and Wiley Matthews, two of the four condemned Bald Knobbers, W. H. Halbansen, Frank Johnson, William Redford, Thomas Rooney and William Sowers, the four robbers, escaped from jail last night by the assistance of friends outside. Dave Walker, leader of the Bald Knobbers, and his son William, also under sentence to hang, and a young man named Baker refused to leave. They were found in their cells when the discovery was made.

ST. LOUIS, December 29.—The four Bald Knobbers who were sentenced to hange for the murder of Charles Green and William Edens on March 11, 1887, were David Walker, better known in Christian county as "Bull Creek Dave," William Walker, Ibsom, John Matthews and Wiley Matthews, his nephews. None of the condemned men have reached their fiftieth year, and William Walker is not yet nineteen years of age. The condemned were to have been hung on May 18, 1888, but on appeal to the supreme court escaped the gallows temporarily. Last October the supreme court affirmed the decision of the Christian county circuit court, and fixed December 28th as the day of execution.

Battle with Oyster Dredgers.

BALTIMORE, December 29.—Information has been received of a desperate fight between police and the sloop Julia Hamilton and a fleet of illegal dredgers that took place last Thursday afternoon in Fishing bay on the Dorchester county coast. Captain Tyler of the Julia Hamilton discovered the pirates at work in the morning and ordered them away. They were enveloped in a dense fog, and as soon as it cleared off, but returned, and in the afternoon Captain Tyler attacked them. The battle continued several hours, over 600 shots being fired from the police boat, and a great many from the boats of the oyster thieves. An unknown dredger was shot through the arm and the boats were badly riddled with bullets, though no serious damage was done. Friday morning the state forces were strengthened by the arrival of the steamer Gov. McLane and five dredging schooners were captured and towed into Cambridge. Their captains escaped.

Stock Market.

NEW YORK, December 29.—The stock market had a true holiday appearance this morning, the attendance being small, the transactions consequently few and unimportant, while the movements in prices possessed but little significance. Except in one or two stocks gains whatever are for small fractions only, except an advance of one per cent in Burlington & Quincy, and are about equally divided between gains and losses. Governments dull and strong. State bonds were dull and steady.

Slugging Champions.

SAN FRANCISCO, December 29.—The result of the Jackson McAuliffe fight last night was a great surprise to a large part of the sporting fraternity. There is no doubt that the admirers of the California lost a large amount of money. President Fulder, of the California Athletic club, was seen this morning and said that the club would not back the fight, and that the club would not back the fight, and that the club would not back the fight, and

Some miscreant cut the rope which holds the large arc light on the corner of Tejon street and Boulder avenue on Thursday night and let it fall to the ground, completely demolishing it. The lamp was worth about $25 The Electric Light company will give a large reward to learn who perpetrated the dirty act.

Erickson & Gough, the bakers and confectioners on South Tejon street, have made and sold during the last few weeks about 300 pounds of candy canes, in addition to many hundreds of pounds of other candies. The making of these canes is an art in itself. One of them weighed six pounds and several others about five pounds.

Mr. W. D. Davis of Columbus, Ohio, who represents the M. C. Lilley Co., manufacturers of regalia, has been taking the measure of the members of the order of Knights of Pythias of this city who have joined the uniform rank recently organized in Myrtle lodge. The Knights of Pythias have one of the prettiest uniforms of any of the secret orders, and the division of the uniform rank here will be one of the best in the state.

Two additional lots were sold yesterday in "Austin Bluff" to eastern capitalists who have come to Colorado Springs to make it their home. Both of these gentlemen propose building very soon, so that there will be at least six fine residences right away on this beautiful tract at an early date. No one thinking of settling here should decide their location until they have examined into the many advantages connected with this locality. Carriage always in attendance to show property at No. 9 North Tejon street.

The cut rate war to Pueblo yesterday created quite a fever, and hundreds of citizens took the benefit of it to visit the Pittsburg of the west. For some days it has been advertised that the Denver & Rio Grande, the Santa Fe, and the Denver, Texas & Gulf would sell excursion tickets to Pueblo for $1.50 for the round trip. Yesterday morning the Rio Grande announced that it would sell them at $1. Immediately the other roads met the cut and went them 50 cents better. Then the Rio Grande dropped to 50 cents and it remained at that figure. The Santa Fe took out nearly a hundred persons, and up to noon the Rio Grande had taken out 103. The Denver, Texas and Gulf did not report, but they carried a large number also. The Firemen's band joined the Rio Grande excursion at noon and enlivened the streets of Pueblo yesterday.

At 8 o'clock last night City Marshal Dana's office in the city hall was invaded by a crowd of citizens, and the worthy officer given one of the handsomest Christmas presents so far reported this year. It was a beautiful gold badge composed of a cross bar with a star pendant. Water Commissioner Ed. Frost made a neat speech expressing the regard of the citizens for Mr. Dana and his efficient work and then presented him with the badge. Mr Dana, though very greatly surprised, thanked the donors in a few words. The badge is the handsomest thing of the kind in the city and cost about $50. Across the top is his name, and on the face of the star are the words, "City marshal of Colorado Springs." In the center is a large ruby. On the back of the badge are the words "Presented by friends, Dec. 25, 1888," and a design showing the three lodges of Odd Fellowship. Upon the five points of the star are emblems of a number of societies to which he belongs. Mr. Dana feels very proud of the gift.

WOMEN OF PERSIA.

Ex-Minister Benjamin Describes the Oriental Costumes.

Many Ways in Which They Differ from American Girls.

Age for Matrimony--No Old Maids--The Divorce Law.

[illegible] from an [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] and America as [illegible] the position of the women in the east. [illegible] other countries where [illegible] rounded and [illegible] there. Turkey and Egypt are gradually yielding to the [illegible] of contact with Europeans. But in Persia these extraordinary limitations to the development of society continue in full force and form one of the greatest obstacles to the introduction into that country of the improvements which mark the progress of civilization in the nineteenth century.

Many persons think the laws and customs regulating the condition of women in Oriental lands are due to the teachings of Mahomet. There could not be a greater mistake. Mahomet simply continued in force and inculcated in a theocratic code principles existing on the subject for ages in the east. It is originally a question of race rather than of religion. The ancient Greeks believed in the seclusion of women, so did the Zoroastrian Persians, so do the pagan East Indians and Chinese, and even some of the Asiatic Christians, such as the Armenians, while the Arabs of the desert and the nomadic tribes of Persia entirely dispense with most of the regulations on the subject followed by Mahometans elsewhere.

At the outset we may say that any sympathy we may feel for women on account of such enforced seclusion may be reserved for other purposes as they are not anxious to have these customs abolished and feel much sympathy for their European sisters and sometimes a strong aversion towards customs which allow a gentleman to show her face or neck and arms in public. It is, after all, a matter of usage, or, as the Turks say, adet, all of which is further shown by the circumstances that while the Persian is smitten with horror at the idea of exposing her face, except on the presence of her husband, she is but little disturbed if she is seen walking through the grass bare above the knees. If a stranger is suddenly discovered approaching when her mantle is down she hastens to draw it tightly over all but an eye, or the fisk, perhaps, of displaying a large portion of her figure. After all, it is a question of adet.

THE INDOOR COSTUME.

The indoor costume of Persian women, from the princess to the slave, is one of the most extraordinary ever invented. In the nature of the case it could only be worn in a warm, dry climate, where the season's change will be slow in progress. It is the movement that marks the progress of old age. This costume consists of a jacket or chemise more or less decorated with needlework. It is caught on the bosom by a single button and reaches to within a few inches above the hips. The middle portion of the body is uncovered. A skirt far more abbreviated than that of a ballet dancer is attached to the lower end, which stands out in a manner that plainly indicates it is intended more for show than for warmth. That is all, excepting a pair of embroidered slippers sometimes and long masses of braided hair often reaching below the waist.

The Persian women are very handsome having a Spanish complexion and a form and expression that are more refined than those of the pure Turkish or Tartar race. The limbs are long, but shapely—a trait which seems especially to mark the Persians, perhaps because of the way they have of sitting on the knees and heels.

Until the age of nine or ten a Persian girl goes unveiled and wanders at will. But about that time she enters on what to all Oriental women is the chief and the inevitable condition of her life—marriage. Very likely her husband is some youth with whom she played in childhood. Persian men marry at fourteen to sixteen and the women at ten to twelve. There are no old maids in that country and very few bachelors. It is common to find a young gentleman, and sometimes one of lower condition, with two or three wives before he is twenty. This custom has been followed there for thousands of years, and the Persian race is still far from effete, either physically or mentally. The Persian women are, however, not very prolific, and many of the children die young, owing to poor diet and ignorance of sanitary laws; and thus the population is kept down.

AFTER MARRIAGE.

As soon as she marries the Persian woman enters an undercrust of her own. There is a term equivalent to harem, and means literally the inner apartments. Clubs are not permitted in Persia, nor indeed would they easily become popular because in the withdrawing room a Persian has a club of which he is the sole god, while there the Persian woman would find influences as great if not greater than any enjoyed by European women. After the day's work is done and the evening coffee is over, the husband and children of the master of the house gather about the sire, and the women and children gather about the mother where the sire is absent. I have yet to learn that so far as this life is concerned there is not as much

R. W. STEELE,
Manager of the Gazette.

It makes the patriotic American heart beat several extra beats to hear of Admiral Luce's success in bull dozing the Black republic. The admiral and his crew should all be brevetted for conspicuous gallantry.

Mr. Forman, who was elected to congress at the recent election from Colonel Morrison's old district, has a fight for his seat before him. John Baker, his republican opponent, has only sixteen charges of fraud so far on which to base the contest for the seat.

The New York Tribune is very indignant that Admiral Luce should have saluted the Haytian flag after the release of the "Haytien Republic." It certainly an unusual compliment to pay to any power which had insulted the United States government. Hayti should have done the saluting.

The democrats of West Virginia are depending for their majority of one on joint ballot in the state legislature on the votes of two labor members. One of these members, it is said, openly declares his intention of voting for the republican senatorial candidate, so that a democratic senator from West Virginia is not such an assured fact as it is claimed.

It is estimated by the government engineers that the sum of $8,2 0,000 will be required to complete the work at Galveston harbor and about $1,400,000 for that at Aransas Pass. The river and harbor bill now before the house appropriates $900,000 for the former and $85,000 for the latter. Assuming that these are to be the average yearly appropriations for these improvements it will take at least twenty years to complete the work. This means that the people of the twenty states and territories west of the Mississippi river must wait twenty years before they will be able to ship their surplus products to foreign countries from the Texas coast. Denver is nearly 700 miles nearer to the Texas coast than it is to New York, or a little less than the distance from Chicago to New York, and for twenty years all product shipped to Europe from Denver must pay the additional cost of railroad transportation on these 800 miles. There is to be said against extravagant appropriations, but the engineers appointed by the government to carry on these works have estimated that at the lowest figures it will require from twice to three times as much as the amount appropriated to carry on the work during the coming year. Thousands of dollars are expended annually in improving creeks and runs for the benefit of a few people who live on their banks and happen to have some influence in congress. But the people of two thirds of the territorial area of the country shipping more than 75 per cent of the grain and beef exported in Europe are compelled to wait for their deep water harbor.

The New Year's Edition.

Saturday Mail.

The GAZETTE company is hard at work on a mammoth illustrated New Year's edition, similar to the one issued last year, and which received a wide circulation and many words of praise. The edition is to be an improvement over the last one and everybody should assist in giving it a wide circulation, as it will be a big advertisement for our city and county. All desiring extra copies should send in their orders at once, so no one will be disappointed. We bespeak for the GAZETTE folks a liberal patronage on New Year's day.

The Colorado Springs GAZETTE will issue a mammoth New Years edition, which will excel in beauty and usefulness its excellent effort in that direction in 1889. It will be handsomely illustrated by three sheets of engravings each sheet 10x27 inches, and each sheet will be printed in a different color of ink in order to give the best effect to the pictures.

Parties who have ordered their New Year's papers to be delivered at their houses are requested not to call at the office for them. Arrangements have been made to deliver them promptly. Papers will be put in wrappers without extra charge, if desired.

A ROYAL MYSTERY.

The Strange Romance Which Seriously Menaces the Retiring Family of France.

From London Truth.

The death of Lord Newborough three weeks ago at the advanced age of 85 will, it is said, lead to a reversal by the present peer of the choice of the fourth to the whole of the property to the princely house of Orleans. The wife of the first Lord Newborough and the grandmother of the present holder of the title was a certain Maria Stella, the adopted daughter of the Champion, the gaoler of the city prison of Milan. Proofs however are said to exist not only in the Newborough family itself but also in Paris, and legal archives at St. Petersburg and at Vienna, that Maria Stella was the illegitimate daughter of Philippe Egalite, Duke of Orleans, and of his wife the duchess. It will be remembered that King Louis Philippe was born of March, consequently the very day on which Lord Newborough's supposed father married Maria Stella. No doubt that the infant was of the gaoler Champion was substituted for the new-born daughter of Philippe Egalite and his wife, the illustrious pair were then Duc and Duchess de Chartres and having no male issue, the motives for the substitution were both obvious and of a powerful nature.

The little girl who was a victim of this fraud grew up into a beautiful woman and made the conquest of the first Lord Newborough. Not only did the jailer Champion make a confession on his death bed concerning the whole matter but at the time subsequent to the marriage of Maria Stella with Lord Newborough the whole of the proceedings connected with the birth of the unfortunate children of Monsieur Champion with the exception of the death of her husband were brought by the procureur of the republic before the court of Modena. How it came about that the supreme court of Modena was the tribunal before which the proceedings were brought is not known. The story was first communicated to the regents of the parish in which Maria Stella was living and to which she desired to be buried, by the clergyman of the royal highness the Duke and Duchess of Cassano. By the command of the supreme court of Modena, the judgment delivered in the case was to be kept secret for ever. Lord Newborough

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., SUNDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1888.

THE TAUCHNITZ CORRESPONDENCE.

A Well-Known American Novelist Gives Extracts from Letters by Dickens, Bulwer, George Eliot, Longfellow, Marryatt, Thackeray, Etc.

(Copyrighted 1888 by Thomas Stanton.)

STUTTGART, Dec. 20, 1888.

The Tauchnitz correspondence with English authors has obviously, in fifty years, assumed large dimensions. In repeated instances there are two or three hundred letters from one person. From thousands upon thousands of letters Baron Tauchnitz junior has published some brief extracts in a memorial volume commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the existence of the house, and laying before its friends its history, scope, and aims. To this volume, issued in a limited edition expressly for the jubilee in 1887, the writer is indebted for the statistics presented in this sketch.

Being, happily a man to whom some things are still sacred Baron Tauchnitz, jr., has made only such excerpts from the letters of authors no longer living as their friends could unhesitatingly hear discussed in mixed society—say at a tabl'e hote. He has performed his task with tact and gentle feeling, and having this vast and most interesting material at hand, has not found it his duty to pander to the prying world, that as Mr Lang remarks in his "Letters to Dead Authors" neglects Moliere's works to gossip about Moliere's great-grandmother's second best bed. Baron Tauchnitz has invariably withheld the hasty compromising word which one may well trust to the indulgence of a friend, but which one never meant one's enemies, or still worse the indifferent, to judge. Many frank expressions of opinion of men and things, many revelations of character, he omits out of respect for the feelings of people still living. From these discreetly chosen fragments a few gleanings are well worth while.

W. Harrison Ainsworth wrote in 1854:

I consider your offer of a very liberal, and in accepting it I beg to tender you my thanks, not so much for the amount as for the praiseworthy spirit with which you are actuated.

After ten years, during which time his relations with Tauchnitz had grown steadily closer, he wrote from Paris:

In dedicating my little tale to you and Mme. Tauchnitz I selected for that dedication the happiest couple I knew. They happened, at the same time, to be amongst my best friends. All the better, for I could prove my regard without the slightest violation of truth. I rejoice to think that anything I have said has given you pleasure. I passed a day with Mr. Dickens at Boulogne, and we spoke much of you and your great kindness.

Lord Lytton's letters express satisfaction at the "fair and handsome treatment" which he was receiving, and also gratitude for all the "kindness and attention which had made his visit in Leipzig so pleasant and instructive.

Carlyle's tone is simply lambike.

CHELSEA, LONDON, Nov. 9, 1865.

I am not willing to trespass further on such munificence of procedure in this matter. Your reprint, which, indeed, is very perfect and far handier to read, is greatly in demand here, and friends accept it from me as a distinguished gift not attainable otherwise.

In 1869 he wrote with reference to material procured for his "Frederick the Great" by Baron Tauchnitz:

No transaction could be handsomer on your part, and you may believe me, I am very sensible of it. . . . the money account concerns me, please attend to that as already said. Friendliness and help cannot be paid, but money can, and always should!

In a letter from Dorchester, Mass., in 1854, Miss Cummins writes as follows about "The Lamplighter"—blessings on the old book which with the "Wide-Wide World" and "Queechy" children were allowed to read when all other novels were tabooed:—

I would express also a most grateful sense of the liberality which you propose to exercise in my behalf, a liberality to which I am well aware I have no claim but through your generosity.

The correspondence with Charles Dickens extending from 1843 to 1870 is of so peculiarly free and intimate a nature that some modern biographers would publish it en bloc. On precisely this account Baron Tauchnitz quotes but a few letters, mostly relating merely to business, but there is a mention of "Dombey and Son" which shows that this master workman did not regard novel writing as child's play.

London, 1, Devonshire Terrace, York Gate, Regent's Park, Oct. 18, 1847.—The occupation of my time with that story is so great just now and I devote so much time to it, that I have resolved not to publish a Christmas book this year, as I could not complete the Christmas story I wish to write under such circumstances in that great labor and fatigue.

The italics are his own. He writes thus of his son Charles, then studying in Germany:

While he is well looked after, as all boys require to be, I wish him to be not too obviously restrained, and to have the advantages of cheerful and good society. I want him to have an interest in and to acquire a knowledge of the life around him and to be treated like a gentleman though perfected in nothing. By punctuality in all things, great and small, I set the

A whole series of letters were devoted to this subject. In December 1850 he wrote from Gad's Hill place:

I cannot consent to name the sum you shall pay for "Great Expectations." I have too great a regard for you and too high a sense of your honorable dealing [illegible] from the [illegible] we have always enjoyed. Whatever pecuniary compensation it will satisfy me [illegible] have always proposed the terms yourself in former negotiations, and I can but [illegible] do so now. It is always a pleasure to have any transaction with you for [illegible] implicitly upon your honorable and upright spirit.

Bulwer-Lytton's remuneration of Tauchnitz, literary city is equally favorable. In fact, the note through which the correspondence both clear and strong. Between Tauchnitz's letters date from 1842 to 1881.

London, July 17, 1844.—It is without extreme satisfaction that I have received your wish to prepare an edition of "Cromwell" for continental circulation, and especially for the German public. The sympathy of a great nation is the most precious reward of authors, and an appreciation such is offered us by a foreign people is something of the character and value which we attribute to the fiat of posterity.

Hagbenden Manor, September 23.—What are called Lives of me Oswald Crawfurd are generally erroneous. I feel which I have invariably treated with utter indifference. Sometimes I ask myself what will Grub street do after my departure? Who will be there to abuse and to contradict? I hope you are well. I am very busy and rarely write letters, but would not use the hand of another in an old friend.

Ah, so, how did he ever accomplish that? It is a beautiful sentiment but could he have lived up to it? And what does his august shade say to the type writer.

Mrs. Bloomfield's business arrangements with Tauchnitz were conducted by her husband, and George Eliot's by Mr Lewes, who expresses "Mrs Lewes's satisfaction at the appearance of her books." He too is willing to leave money matters in the hands of the baron and says:

As to remuneration, from your having transmitted English authors an honorarium at the time when no law of copyright rendered such an action imperative, I have received such an idea of your liberality and probity as to leave it to you to send me whatever sum you consider the success of the work may justify.

He also writes in a familiar and friendly tone of running over to Leipzig in the autumn or spring to visit the Physiological library, and doing some work there, and "we should like to time our visit so as to be able to enjoy the concerts at the Conservatory . . . ," he adds.

Among John Forster's letters are these.

PALACE GATE-HOUSE, June 29, 1872.

I have had a severe attack of illness, and was quite unable until yesterday to read the proofs of "Goldsmith" you so kindly have sent me. I have never read anything printed with a more absolute accuracy. They are correct to the minutest point and in the whole style of printing admirable. Nothing could possibly be more satisfactory. The death of my old and dear friend, Lord Lytton, has been a terrible blow to me, and must excuse my delay in replying to your last letter. The volumes, when complete, will be very handsome and legible, and for pleasantness and handiness of shape much to be preferred to the original. They suggest to me a sort of work that they might be accompanied, with some accession of matter to them for German readers by what I never could print in connection with them here, "a facsimile of the letter addressed to me by Dickens on the first publication of the work in 1849." It is a long letter, filling two sheets, and which has full of praise of the book to permit me ever to mention its publication here. But a foreign edition—as Lord Beaconsfield is no more—would be it would at least be less inappropriate in it appeared in your German edition.

PALACE GATE HOUSE, March 18, 1873.

I have been extremely ill and unmanly now very slowly moving to convalescence. It was not, however, to [illegible] which withheld me from writing [illegible] letter your [illegible] this morning. The truth is that on receiving your dear friend's letter on the 3d I feared that its language was [illegible] might hardly with propriety allow of its publication while I live—even before, in substance that would in some sort represent what I may hope will stand [illegible] when I am gone.

The letter of Dickens upon Forster's "Life of Goldsmith" appears, according to Baron Tauchnitz's express wish in the Tauchnitz edition issued for the continent, and is suppressed in all author's copies of the book sent into England.

It must have been pleasant to write as Lady Georgiana Fullerton could:

I have received your kind note. It is very good of you to be so willing to accept my works. One thing I may say to you first—when you send me a check for one of them, you are giving to the poor, and that I have often thanked you in my heart as one of their benefactors.

Mrs Gaskell complains feelingly that her "Dark Nights Work" has to be very much compressed and spoilt to suit the purposes of "Household Words," and writes Tauchnitz that she shall [illegible] with part of the [illegible] matter.

In another letter she says:

I have a 5th daughter of eighteen years of age who is so very German that she declares she was born in England by mistake.

Again:

I am very glad that "A Dark Night's Work" has reached you safe. I am afraid it is rather short for an original. I am very sorry, but alas! I had no more to say about them having at last married Florence Nightingale. My daughters are extremely looking forward to paying you a visit.

Only short but cordial business letters from Washington Irving and Hawthorne are given.

John Kavanagh writes with a tender and sweet tempered touch. One feels the warmth of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE TAUCHNITZ-COBDEN LETTERS

A Well Known American Novelist Gives Extracts from Letters by Dickens, Thackeray, Etc.

(Copyrighted, 1888, by the Press Publishing Association.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—[Special.]—The Tauchnitz correspondence with English authors was obviously in fifty years, assumed huge dimensions. In repeated instances there are two or three hundred letters from one person. From thousands upon thousands of letters Baron Tauchnitz, junior, has published some brief extracts in a memorial volume commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the existence of the house, and having before its friends its history, scope, and aims. To this volume, issued in a limited edition expressly for the jubilee in 1887, the writer is indebted for the statistics presented in this sketch.

Being frippely, a man to whom some things are still sacred Baron Tauchnitz, jr., has made only such excerpts from the letters of authors no longer living as their friends could unfeelingly hear discussed in mixed society—say at a table d'hote. He has performed his task with tact and gentle feeling, and having this vast and most interesting material at hand, has not found it his duty to make, to the prying world, that ay Mr. Page remarks in his "Letters to Dead Authors" neglects Moliere's works to gossip about Moliere's great-grandmother's second best bed. Many frank expressions of opinion of men and things, many revelations of character, he omits out of respect for the feelings of people still living. From these discreetly chosen fragments a few gleanings are well worth while.

W. Harrison Ainsworth wrote in 1844:

I have never read anything printed with a more singular accuracy. They are correct to the minutest point—and in the whole style of printing admirable. Nothing could possibly be more satisfactory. The death of my old and dear friend, Lord Lytton, has been a terrible blow to me, and must excuse my delay in replying to your last letter. The volume when complete, will be very handsome and legible, and for pleasantness and handiness of shape match to be preferred to the original. They suggest to me a sort of wish that they might be accompanied, with some accession of interest to them for German readers, by what I never could print in connection with them here, a facsimile of the letter addressed to me by Dickens on the first publication of the book in 1848. It is a long letter, filling two sheets and not a too full of praise of the book to permit me ever to mention its publication here. If in a foreign country was Lord Byron's—is another name and there would not be less impropriety in permitting it to appear in your German edition.

PALACE GATE HOUSE, March 15, 1872.

I have been extremely ill—and am only now very slowly moving to convalescence. It was not, however, simply this which withheld me from sending the letter you are so good as to inquire after this morning. The truth is that on reading my dear friend's letter again, I feared that its language was such that I might hardly with propriety allow of its publication while I live—even before an audience that would in some sort represent what I most hope will await me when I am gone.

The letter of Dickens upon Forster's "Life of Goldsmith" up are, according to Baron Tauchnitz's express wish in the Tauchnitz edition issued for the continent, and is suppressed in all author's copies of the book sent into England.

It must have been pleasant to write as Lady Georgiana Fullerton could:

I have received your kind note. It is very good of you to be so willing to accept my works. One thing I may say to you, that is, when you send me a present for one of them, you are giving to the poor, and that I have often thanked you in my heart as one of their benefactors.

Mrs. Gaskell complains feelingly that her "Dark Night's Work has to be very much compressed in order to suit the purposes of "Household Words," and [illegible] assures Tauchnitz that she shall send him a sixth part additional matter.

In another letter she says:

I have a little daughter of fifteen years of age, who is so very German that she declares she was born in England by mistake.

Again:

I am very glad that "A Dark Night's Work" has reached you safe. I am afraid it is rather short for one volume. I am very sorry, but also I had no more to say about them having at last married Elinor happily. My daughters in Hare anxiously looking forward to paying you a visit.

Only short but cordial business letters from Washington Irving and Hawthorne are given.

Julia Kavanagh writes with a tender and sweet-tempered touch. One feels [illegible] the news of Macaulay's death [illegible] he knew she had you. When you had [illegible] I was present at his [illegible] Westminster Abbey. The last [illegible] "Les Poetes Comme." One felt [illegible] to the [illegible] history. Among those present I saw Dean Stanley, Lord Houghton, Lord Rosebery, Lord Granville, Lord Carlingford, Lord Lyttelton, Lord Selborne, Lord Cranbrook, Lord Kimberley, Lord Derby, Lord Hartington, Lord Spencer
